FIVE EUROPEAN WOMEN

A leader's role is to balance short-term and long-term planning needs	37
Investors and decision makers are leading, policymakers are still following.....	40
A manager's role is to balance individual and collective performance.....	43
Women in business are better prepared and work harder than men	46
We should be proud of Europe's achievements, but not let her rest on her laurels.....	49
 Anne Rigail - Chief Executive Officer of Air France.....	 53
"The performance of the collective should always be greater than the sum of individual performances."
A holistic approach to business performance requires holistic metrics	55
Changing the culture of a company is a daily challenge, but is essential to success.....	57
Cultural changes must not be merely conceptual.....	59
Individual performance and individual contributions build collective success.....	60
Continual self-examination, flexibility and agility are the keys to success.....	63

SOMMAIRE

Women are not given seats at the table, they take them	64
Leadership is realigning with values traditionally perceived as feminine	66
The European Union has an opportunity to play a strongly positive role in the future of the economy.....	67
Cristina Garmendia - President of the ‘Fundación España Constitucional’	73
“In business, national politics, and international politics, consensus-building and flexibility are key to building robust organisations and policies.”
An integrated approach to business and to life is an essential building block.....	75
Success is a solid business culture that will defend itself from external threats....	78
Performance achieved as a collective, is greater than the sum of all individual performance	79
Successful companies are capable, audacious, transparent and honest	82
Success in politics requires the accurate and rapid identification of potential courses of action, but contrary to popular belief, does not require confrontation—and

FIVE EUROPEAN WOMEN

it will change your life!.....	84
Performance is a sociocultural issue, not a genetic one.....	87
The European project must continue to combine competitiveness and social inclusion.....	90
European solutions are needed to tackle global issues, but flexibility is key in light of our inability to predict the future	92
Julie Chapon - Co-founder of Yuka.....	97
“Revenue is a means to an end in a company that has a societal goal: non-economic key performance indicators are the most important ones.”
Yuka—a tech company unlike any other.....	99
Economic performance is a means to an end.....	100
Our income is sourced by our users.....	102
Yuka is structurally collaborative and consensual	105
Traditional individual performance management is of little interest to us	106
The most important collective performance indicators at Yuka are non-economic.....	108

SOMMAIRE

Success as a woman in business means something different to each woman.....	111
Increased regulatory convergence will drive further growth in the EU.....	113
Laurie Pilo - Managing Director of Ayming Benelux.....	117
“Generational changes in attitudes are driving a change in frames of reference for the assessment of business performance.”
The first step to assessing business performance is identifying a frame of reference	119
New generations are demanding new frames of reference	121
Women should not have to behave like men to succeed like men.....	124
Gender stereotypes persist, and team-level diversity is key to unlocking performance.....	127
European performance is built on European talent, and this talent must be encouraged	129
